

The Ultimate Holiday Gift Giving Guide for Beer Lovers

Every beer aficionado wants to expand their repertoire of beer knowledge, beer gadgets, collection, and even breweries they've experienced.

There are a few killer gifts that every beer lover would be overjoyed to receive for the holiday season and they are as follows:

#1 - "Beer of the Month Club" Membership

There are tons of different "Beer of the Month" Clubs found online. You can either choose to have the beer shipped to you or have the mixture sent so a master brewer can brew it themselves. Check out the following sites for available monthly clubs:

BeerMonthClub.com

AmazingBeerClub.com

MicroBeerClub.com

HogsHead

#2 - Collection of Different Beer Tasting Glasses

Every beer lover knows that with a beer comes the perfect serving glass. Stella, Samuel Adams and Chimay are just a few of the breweries that have glasses created for a specific tasting experience. Consider buying your beer lover a pair of each of the most popular beer tasting glasses, or even a whole set of different kinds from mugs to steins to chalices.

Here is a fantastically priced set from Libbey of 6 different craft beer glasses ranging from porter to pilsner.

#3 - Beer Brewing Kit

Has your beer-loving gift receiver always considered brewing their own beer but didn't know where to get started? There are tons of options to getting started ranging from Brooklyn Brew Shop's \$40 beer making kit to a more comprehensive beer making kit from Holiday Beer Shop's Platinum Kit.

#4 - Beer tasting at a new brewery

Is there a new beer that they absolutely love? Consider creating a memorable experience by crafting plans for a trip to this brewery. There are tons of breweries that have group tours and even more intimate tasting tours. Plan a weekend away with a beer tasting or a brewery tour that they'll never forget.

#5 - A Night of Tasting New Beers

Follow along in the footsteps of creating a memorable experience for your beer-loving friend, relative or significant other. Find out their favorite types of beers like ales, stouts or wheat beers. Then, travel to your local beer shop - preferably the one with the best selection - and gather a bunch of different beers. Then set a night aside and invite their friends over and pair these delicious beers with fruits, chocolates, cheeses and whatever else may complement the flavors.

This is a great way to help them expand their base of go-to beers and even spoil them a bit with new beers that they might not have purchased or thought to try themselves.

Impress and spoil your significant-other, friend or relative with an amazingly thoughtful and useful gift. If none of these are feasible options - you can always go for the t-shirts, bottle openers or magnets with their favorite beer-brand's logo.
